ENGLISH FRENCH

Say “Chernobyl”, “Bhopal” or “Exxon Valdez” and people will spontaneously respond, “Oh, yes! I remember... something terrible happened there...” but that’s about all they recall. For most people, these catastrophes happened a long time ago and “everything is OK now, right?”

Not quite. Despite governmental and corporate efforts to make us believe that everything is fine, the reality is altogether different. Thousands of people are still suffering from the long-term effects of these terrible tragedies, which rank among the most severe that humankind has ever seen.

This film revisits the sites of the catastrophes and asks a single question: Do people ever recover from a tragedy of this magnitude?

The film makes no attempt to explain the accidents. It simply focuses on the long-term consequences on physical and mental health, society and the environment. It also brings to light the never-ending struggles of entire communities to obtain justice from their governments and large corporations.
